Medical Astrology - Diabetes

Diabetes

- The blood of man contains a trace of glucose about 0.07-0.12 percent. This trace, however is vital for the life of the cells. If the amount drops to 0.03 percent (30ppm) convulsions and death with result. In the disease diabetes mellitus, the concentration of glucose in the blood, reaches a level above 0.14 percent, and again death may result.
- The pancreas is both an exocrine and an endocrine gland since it produces enzymes for digestion as well as important hormones. One hormone is insulin. Insulin, a protein material, helps to govern the rate at which blood sugar is absorbed and oxidized in the cells and stimulates the liver to produce more glycogen or sugar reserves.
- An excess of insulin in the blood increases the rate of oxidation of sugar and as the sugar disappears, there is a serious drop in blood sugar. The 2nd hormone produced by the pancreas, glucagon, stimulates the liver to increase the amount of a liver enzyme, phosphorus lase, which acts on liver glycogen and converts it to glucose. The two enzymes insulin and glucagon thus work together to maintain blood sugar balance.
- As the sugar levels rise, the kidneys take the extra load to excrete more and more sugar. In the advanced of diabetes mellitus, the patient will lapse into coma and die shortly afterwards unless treated with insulin.

Astrological background of diabetes

- Liver which metabolises glucose and the pancreas which produces insulin are located in the upper part of the abdomen. This area falls in the jurisdiction of 5th house.
- Jupiter is the significator of the liver and some part of pancreas. Venus is the significator of the remaining part of the pancreas.
- When insulin is not produced, sugar level goes up and kidneys get extra load to process. Urine gets sugar in it. Kidneys and upper ureter falls in the jurisdiction of 6th house.
